Targit Trials: Patient, Public and Investigators Event

October is the breast cancer month!

On the 11th of October SITU is hosting:

A day to remind interested parties of the Targit trials. Targit compares current radiotherapy methods in women with breast cancer to a novel method of delivering radiotherapy directly to the tumour bed in theatre while the patient is still anaesthetised and before the wound is closed. Come and find out what we have learnt so far, what we are doing now and what we are planning to do in the future.

Registration starts at 930, tea and coffee will be available from 9:00.

The venue:
Royal Free Hospital, Rowland Hill St, HAMPSTEAD - LONDON, NW3 2PF

Please use the ‘Rowland Hill Hospital Entrance’ via Roland Hill Street as it’s easier to get to the lecture theatre from here rather than from the main hospital entrance

Running order of the day

10am start
Welcome
A patient’s perspective
“Why can’t I just chose: tricky conversations about Randomised Controlled Trials” by Professor Dame Lesley Fallowfield DBE

12 00 lunch

Restart at 1300h
The Targit Trials – where we are. (SITU)
A Radiotherapist perspective
Talk to the organ-grinder (Direct Patient contact)
Closing Remarks – Professor Jayant Vaidya

Finish at 16:00h

To register to attend log on to https://www.eventbrite.com/e/targit-trials-patients-healthcare-professionals-and-the-public-tickets-38280305424